

Join AFREN at the 'WA Crop Technology Centre Field Day' in Esperance, hosted by FAR Australia

Concerned about Fungicide Resistance in your Crop?

Don't let fungicide resistance threaten your productivity. Bring us a sample from your field and we will test your crop for fungicide resistance whilst you attend the annual FAR Australia field day in Esperance!

Facilitated by the Centre for Crop and Disease Management (CCDM) team from Curtin University, The Australian Fungicide Resistance Extension Network (AFREN) invites you to a free, real-time resistance testing event that will take place at FAR Australia's Crop Technology Centre annual field day in Esperance.

Gain insights from fungicide resistance expert Associate Professor Fran Lopez Ruiz from Curtin University. Hosted by FAR Australia and supported by the Grains Research and Development Corporation (GRDC), this event provides a unique opportunity to test your crop for resistance at no cost!

Whilst we test your sample for fungicide resistance, view a range of innovative grains research and delve into expert insights and discussions on best management practices that are shaping the future of the Australian grains industry.

Don't wait, register to attend FAR Australia's field day in Esperance!

And remember to bring in a sample for free testing on the day!

BRING A SAMPLE FROM YOUR FIELD

- Cut or freshly pick collected leaves and stems from your field. 3 to 4 leaves from a plant (wheat and barley) are perfect!
- At the field day, hand in your sample at the AFREN testing station near the FAR registration table.
- We will take your samples and prepare them for testing.
- Fill in a simple form so we know what crop type it is from, and who to contact with results.
- Enjoy the field day!
